BASED ON A TRUE STORY

Preventing theft and securing valuables is more than just locking your car.

Preventing vehicle theft and car damage is becoming critical with repair times at an all-time high and part costs at their highest in 20 years. The average vehicle repair takes 4-5 weeks [1], even higher in the luxury auto industry. Finding qualified technicians and labor cost increases have added to this challenge.

Similarly, because car theft is also at record highs since 2008, safety and security of luxury vehicles must mean more than locking doors. One of the biggest temptations of car break ins and theft is leaving valuables in plain sight.

On the way home from the airport, *Tyrell stopped for food with a car full of luggage.

Tyrell and his wife had a long flight home and stopped to get food at a restaurant after leaving the airport. They had stored several large suitcases in their car in the back seat of their luxury SUV in plain sight.

Despite parking the car in front of the restaurant where it was visible to passersby, their car was broken into. The thieves stole suitcases in the backseat.

Besides the stolen luggage, the car doors, dash, and seats were damaged during the break in. Due to supply chain issues, Tyrell's luxury customizations and smart technology were difficult to repair and took six months to replace.

Vault stepped in to ensure Tyrell was comfortable in a temporary vehicle and his car, including all customizations, were repaired to its original condition.

Vault advised him and his wife to secure all valuables out of sight, in the trunk, or not left in the vehicle at all to prevent break ins and theft of their luxury car.

"Our son was in a car accident away at college. Not living close to his school, we relied on our Vault claims manager to guide our son through this nerve-racking and stressful situation. He took excellent care of our son and his car. He also kept me in the loop so I wouldn't worry. His personal service went above and beyond to ensure that our family was well taken care of. He has earned our gratitude and continued business. Thank you!"
